The methods of this conflict evolve with the development of technologies, political systems and the nature of interests. Therefore, the wars directly and indirectly affect various aspects of life, especially peace and community security, regionally and internationally. This happens in particular in light of the globalization of the world and mutual relations and common interests, and the development in the means of communication and technology. Thus, distant parties suffer from the effects and consequences of wars and conflicts in other regions because relations and the need for waterways or economic aspects may be affected by conflict or wars. From here the international interest in the issue of security and peace from the countries arose. Especially the Security Council and the United Nations worked to prevent conflicts on the one hand, stop them or minimize their effects. Many conflicts and wars have erupted in the region, some of which have lasted for years, and others return in each period to arise under what justification. INTRODUCTION

What Is National Security and Its Components?

Security in general is one of the requirements of life for humanity, whether at the level of the individual, society, state or region or the largest ocean, which is the whole world, and there is a relationship between security and development, and each country seeks to build its security.

All countries of the world and international organizations are working to achieve security worldwide (Osama, 2020).

With the development of conflict and international relations on the one hand and technical development and globalization, this evolved at different levels.

Robert McNamara is the most prominent of the link between the concept of security and development and said security means development. In his book (The Essence of Security), he believed that security is achieved through comprehensive national development and not military equipment. Although it does include it, nor conventional military activity, although it may be covered (Nahar, 2021).

The concept of security has caused a major concern for intellectuals and decision-makers alike, as ensuring survival and security has been a major concern for intellectuals and decision-makers.

It continued to be a priority for domestic and foreign policy,

He discussed the role of law and order in achieving security without focusing on the diabetes aspect - as reported to us.

Strategic School - if security includes something, it includes a minimum amount of order and stability and achieve them through military force only becomes impossible, he adds: without development, there is no security (McNamara).

International security or global security is a set of measures taken by States and international organizations - United Nations, European Union etc - for ensuring continued security and mutual peace.

"International security of the state" often in the Charter of the United Nations, resolutions of the General Assembly and the UN Security, Decisions of the International Court of Justice, Documents of International Organizations and Bilateral Conventions and multilateralism is between states, legal documents and doctrine of international law. Yet, no the whole concept is in international documents, and there is no clear and universally recognized definition of this concept in the doctrine (Al-Taweel, 2012).

Based on Article 1, paragraph 1, of the Charter of the United Nations, Article 1: "The maintenance of international peace and security. So, the Commission takes effective joint measures for the prevention and elimination of threats to the peace, and suppresses aggression and other breaches of the peace, and invokes peaceful means, based on justice and international law, for resolving international disputes breaching the peace or to their settlement". So the founding States have affirmed to the United Nations that international security (such as peace) is a certain state of international relations, that is, it is a state that exists already from objective reality. The frequent use of these in the Charter of the United Nations indicates that international peace is a state of international relations with no war, and is different from international security, security International is international relations with only peace is guaranteed with disputes resolved peacefully (United Nations Resolution on the central role of the United Nations in maintaining international peace and security and promoting cooeration).

National and international security are becoming increasingly intertwined, which in turn determines the need for states for application comprehensively.

Cooperative to the issue of international security, threats to peace and security in the twenty-first century do not include wars and international conflicts only, however violence against civilians, organized crime, terrorism and mass destruction weapons, poverty, deadly infectious illness and degradation of the environment.

All the threats lead to people's death or reduce their chances of survival.

Life in large areas, and each of these threats can undermine the state as the international system basic unit.

It is natural that there is international and regional economic cooperation that seeks to achieve integration and trade exchange in a way that contributes to stability and providing the requirements of living, and this means working to secure the food security system that plays in securing

The elements of sovereignty and freedom of decision, from here many countries seek to break the will of any must by violating food security and going to the industry of hunger and thus subjugating the people and bringing them to their knees under the necessity of bread and basic requirements for the sustainability of life.

War is a phenomenon, whatever its causes and geographical limitations, the parties to the conflict or its legitimacy and is not without impact.

Especially when it is between parties or countries that constitute a food center or a source of goods and services.

Wars also affect economic process which shows international relations or the economic and political system.

Thus, the phenomenon of international conflict is very complex and intertwined, and the conflict over natural resources can be considered

The contradiction of thought, ideologies, ethnic and racial conflicts, the struggle for international status, and technological progresses is the most significant cause of international conflict. Also several methods of managing international conflict can be relied upon including the diplomatic method, the judicial method, the method of economic sanctions, the method of using force, or threat.
The form of international conflict, wars, invasion, imposition of blockade between countries and obstruction of the movement of exchange inevitably is reflected on the economic system and social stability, but rather affect savings, investment and development movement. Also, many wars and battles caused a problem for the food crisis and economic stability, and even reached the point of famine and killing.

People are different and countries are brought to their knees, and history deals with many wars, the circles of influence on humanity differ in different shapes (Mawla, 2022).

Second: The Russian-Ukrainian War: Motives and Effects

After the Soviet Union dissolution in 1989 and the accompanying some countries independence, the reality was rearranged.

The Russian, and the exclusivity of the American pole in managing the world, and then the emergence of other military and economic poles appeared.

Russia is involved in the struggle for influence, especially in neighboring countries, of which it was a part, and which have become a threat.

But in this century, the world has been shaken and the economy has been affected by a chronic international conflict between Russia and Russia and Ukraine, where Russia has tried to invade and fabricate repeated wars for control and weaken Ukrainian power especially after entering NATO or it poses a source of danger to Russian security. This was after Russia regains its influence under Putin and shares influence with America and China (Khalid & al-Mahdi, 2018).

Here, Ukraine represented one of the important countries in the former Soviet Union, and it was among the strategy if republics for this established industries and bases and granted privacy, funding and strengthening being one of the fronts of power against NATO. This is after the collapse of the Union and the independence of some of the countries and republics that the Russians could not restore because of the presence of an external force or the fact that it has the ability to defend its power or the strategy of its position. Here the Russians became in Dilemma and embarrassment because Ukraine is an arsenal of weapons and a stronghold of Soviet power, and the West is dependent on its support. Then, it was included in the European group in the NATO alliance and this means that NATO has become very close to the Russians.

National security requirements, hence Russia worked to co-opt Ukraine through diplomatic means or on

Contrary to from it and there was an agreement that Russia believes that NATO does not approach its borders. It has the Republic or Krana constituting a crisis in Russia's security strategy and a source of concern, as well as the presence of cities and regions.

Most of its people are of Russian origin, hence Russia with its various rulers, especially Putin, did not leave a chance except he used it to control some land from or Kranya under the pretext of defending the community or weakening Ukrainian. More than one war and battle since the secession and independence of Ukraine until the last war 2022 appeared (Abboud, 2022).

Russian military in Crimea on February 20, 1402, Russian propaganda could not claim that Russian aggression was the result of the European Square movement. The war in Ukraine did not happen "suddenly", but planned it in advance and preparations began in 3002. Later, Iliarionov stated that one of the Russian plans to wage war with Ukraine in 2015 after the presidential election, but the field precipitated the confrontation(Rasoul, 2018).

This followed the Ukrainian revolution and the European Square movement in 2014. By late 2017, Current war - Russian invasion of Ukraine 2022

Ukrainian-Russian Crisis 2021—2022

The war began with a large military build-up, initially in March 2021, then in October 2021 in February 2022.
On February 21, 2022, after recognizing the Donetsk and Lugansk People's Republics, Putin ordered the dispatch of Russian troops (including heavy machinery) to Donbass, in a "peacekeeping mission" according to Russia.

The Russian military said it had killed five of what it described as "Ukrainian saboteurs" crossing the border into Russia denied by Ukrainian Foreign Minister Dmytro Kuleba (Atef, 2023).

Later, independent media confirmed that Russian troops had actually entered the Donbass.

US President Joe Biden stated on February 22, 2022 that "the Russian invasion of Ukraine" had begun.

NATO Secretary-General Jens Stoltenberg and Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau said that "more invasion" has happened. Ukrainian Foreign Minister Kuleba stated: There is no such thing as a small or medium invasion or big. An invasion is an invasion," said the EU's foreign policy chief, Josep Borrell. Russian troops arrived in Ukrainian territory in what was not a complete invasion (Amin, 2022).

The Russian invasion of 2022 marked a turning point in international conflict, the division of influence and the restructuring of accountability is not limited in impact, but has expanded and diversified in various countries of the world. The fact that the two countries are a source of the main sources of energy, gas and food sources.

Hence, the war affected the food security system and was affected prices, which led to imbalances and confusion of the economies of different countries (Abboud, 2022).

It is natural that this war is not limited to a region or a remote spot, but reality shows the size, type and impact of the Russian war on global security through the following (Fahd, 2021):

1. Imbalance and aggression against independent states and deduction of parts thereof,

2. The economic security of many countries that depend on the import of grain from Ukraine has been affected, and this is inevitably.

It will reflect on the food security of the countries, especially the neediest countries that do not have strategic storage of grain.

Russia and Ukraine, the parties to the conflict, are of great importance to the world economy in the fields of inflation.

Energy and food in particular, it goes without saying Russia’s position in relation to the global energy market, and Russia is the fifth largest exporter of wheat in the world, and the two countries are among the top five cereal exporters globally.

Political repercussions: This crisis may have political repercussions that not only affect the state parties to the conflict, but also in the form of the distribution of power in the international system, the Russian decision was to start the military operation in Ukraine.

All threats and strange warnings - from our point of view - a declaration of polarity decline.
The unilateralism that the world has experienced since the end of the Cold War with the dissolution of the Soviets in 1991. When Moscow attacked a country of economic, strategic and political importance to the West was a strong and tangible reaction.

On the side of Washington, the leader of the Western camp, this is tantamount to announcing the Western retreat at the top of the international system.

Military repercussions: Following the Ukrainian crisis, the German Minister of Finance came out to announce that his country is seeking to be one of the strongest armies in Europe, if not the best armed.

His country and his goal are also commensurate with the responsibilities and importance of Germany in Uria.

CONCLUSIONS

From this presentation we can find that war, whatever its nature and motives, will inevitably affect the security human and societal system depending on its location and geostrategy, the sphere of influence expands, especially when weapons are used.

With comprehensive destruction, the duration increases, and the circle of war expands, then security is in the region, then the region, and then international security, because there is economic and political interdependence.

Regarding the Russian-Ukrainian war, there is a global crisis related to energy resources and food security requirements, trade exchange, the cessation of relations, or the entry of the Russian-Western relationship into global tension, and foreign support is not hidden. All scenarios lead to Russia losing or a dishonorable exit and weakening its influence by a number of countries, including the Middle East.

We can say that the current crisis is one of the most dangerous crises in the history of Europe and even in the history of the world.

Altogether, given the weight of its two sides and the possibility of its expansion in a way that threatens Europe's entry into a major war, it has not witnessed the end of World War II. It is a crisis that can be compared to the famous Cuban crisis, but the difference was the speed with which it ended.

Because both parties realize how close they were to a catastrophe that would erase human existence, it seems that the current crisis has.

It lasts a little in light of mutual stubbornness and insistence between the two main parties to the crisis in not accepting the demands of the other party.

The other is due to how vital Ukraine is for each of them, which threatens to have more negative effects.

For example, the economic impact will be reflected on the entire world, not to mention the political and perhaps also military effects it may have.

Its effects also on the historical image of the system, which is already on the verge of change, and from here we have.

We presented the crisis historically, clarifying both Russian and foreign interests in the crisis, as well as addressing the repercussions

the beginning of the Russian special operation in Ukraine on February 24, 2022, which marked the end of a historical period for more than half a century. Also, the relations between Russia and the West have returned to the Cold War once again, and the impact of this war on Strategic stability.

The Ukrainian problem, sooner or later, will be resolved peacefully, no matter how difficult it is. After this outcome now or even in the process of moving towards peace and the possible resumption of dialogue between Russia and the United States on reducing armaments: The events in Ukraine constituted a turning point in the development of European and global policy over the past century was the period when an unprecedented détente between Russia and the West began to flourish and then collapse.

In the end, we note that the world will change dramatically even if it avoids the worst scenario for the development of events - escalation.

The Ukrainian conflict could lead to a nuclear war, but even under a more favorable scenario it is very likely that it would lead to a military conflict and international crisis to military technology.

Given the current realities of world politics, one can predict the deterioration of international relations and the complexity of the situation geopolitically regarding Russia. Western leaders declared comprehensive economic freedom against it to undermine its economic sovereignty.

The sanctions announced by the United States aim to destroy Russia's financial system, and for this purpose of Gold and foreign currency assets of the central bank and the United States was able to unite Europe on the basis.

The peculiarity of the modern confrontation is evident in its hybrid nature, that is, the combination of violent means and peace, combining conventional warfare, large-scale information, psychological influence, and special operations use.

Here we can say that the first and main obstacle is the risk of the outbreak of a large-scale war.

Other NATO countries are attracted to this, as NATO provides such a volume of assistance to Ukraine.

For us to talk about it as an unofficial member of NATO, it is noted here that Ukraine is not ready yet. In order to complete the alliance, it is necessary to meet certain political, economic and military criteria, and some may conflict with each other. NATO countries, such as Hungary, and Ukraine not joining the alliance, as Hungary and Ukraine differ over the status of the speaking minority in Hungarian on Ukrainian territory, on the other hand, Ukraine’s accession to NATO may be seen as a victory.

My propaganda for President Vladimir Putin constantly criticized NATO's expansion towards Eastern Europe and said that it constituted threats to the security of Russia.

As for the Gaza war, the region has entered into an armed conflict and the restructuring of some areas, and Israel.

It will work to drag the region into a comprehensive war in order to export its problems, increase support for the West, and strengthen control over each other especially in light of the participation of the resistance countries under any justification or opportunity they find to eliminate Hamas, weakening Palestinian and Arab capabilities, and creating a reality of normalization with countries.
